

About NPF

The purpose of the Police Foundation is to help the police be more effective in doing their job, whether it be deterring robberies, intervening in potentially injurious family disputes, or working to improve relationships between the police and the communities they serve. To accomplish our mission, we work closely with police officers and police agencies across the country, and it is in their hard work and contributions that our accomplishments are rooted.

National Police Foundation (NPF)

Description:

We are the oldest nationally-known, nonprofit (501c3), nonpartisan, and nonmembership-driven organization dedicated to improving America's most noble profession – policing.

Stakeholder(s):

Citizens :

Every citizen has a stake in the success of American policing.

Police Officers :

The police are the crucial link in the nation's system of crime control and the local agency of government on duty 24 hours a day to protect lives, homes, and property. Everywhere in the nation, police can be the catalyst for community crime prevention efforts.

NPF Business Strategies Advisory Group :

Advisors to the National Police Foundation come from a myriad of distinct backgrounds and locales, hailing from both the private and public sectors. What they all have in common is that they have distinguished themselves as thought leaders in their respective fields, believe in the mission of the Foundation, and understand the impact it has on society. As advisors, they take a role as ambassadors for the Foundation, helping educate the public on the unique role the Foundation plays to help advance the science and research of policing. They support us by generously contributing their intellectual capital, volunteering their time, and in many cases, providing financial support. Their role is distinct, vital, and critical. They support and compliment the Board of Directors, executive management, and the Foundation as a whole while serving the public interest to help the policing profession best serve our citizenry.

Greg Orman :

Greg Orman is an entrepreneur, businessman, and leading voice in the U.S. political independent movement. His career includes founding, growing, and helping to lead companies that range in value from a few million dollars to over a billion. At age 23, Mr. Orman started his first business, Environmental Lighting Concepts (ELC), which designed and installed energy-efficient lighting. Mr. Orman grew ELC into a nationwide company with offices in Minneapolis, Kansas City, Atlanta, Pittsburgh, and Dallas. In 1997, Mr. Orman sold 70 percent of ELC to a subsidiary of Kansas City Power & Light. He agreed to run KCP&L's unregulated energy services and became the CEO of Custom Energy. In 2000, Mr. Orman was given responsibility for all of KCP&L's unregulated businesses, and over the next two years, grew revenue from roughly $100 million to just under $800 million. Mr. Orman left KCP&L in December of 2002 and has invested in and helped to build over a dozen companies in a range of industries. In his current capacity as founder of Exemplar Holdings, Mr. Orman's investments include:

- Healthcare/Fitness: Innovative products and technology to reduce healthcare costs and improve overall health.
- Value-Added Real Estate: Renovating or otherwise improving real-estate property with an emphasis on energy efficiency.
- Green Businesses: Glass recycling, innovative reusable insulation, greenhouse gas capture, and financing of energy-efficiency projects.

Mr. Orman currently serves on the advisory board of the National Police Foundation and has served on the board of directors at the Kansas City Zoo and chaired the Capital Campaign for the YMCA Youth in Government program, among other charitable activities. Mr. Orman also helped form the National Association of Nonpartisan Reformers and is on the board of directors at Unite America. In 2014, Mr. Orman ran as an Independent candidate for U.S. Senate in Kansas, earning 43 percent of the vote and falling just short of defeating incumbent Senator Pat Roberts. At the time, NBC News referred to Mr. Orman as "the most interesting man in politics." In 2018, Mr. Orman ran again as an Independent, this time as a candidate for the office of Kansas Governor. He is the author of A Declaration of Independents and has been a frequent contributor to Real Clear Politics. His writing has been featured in The Wall Street Journal, The Hill, The Washington Examiner, The Kansas City Star, and other national media outlets. He has appeared on CNN, Fox News, MSNBC, Bloomberg, and numerous other local TV and radio stations. Greg Orman graduated with High Honors from Princeton University. He lives in the Kansas City Area with his wife, Sybil, and their two daughters.

Vincent Scoca :

Mr. Scoca is the founding Partner of Vincent Scoca Law Offices. He is a graduate of Seton Hall University, where he holds a B.A. (1976). He also holds a Juris Doctorate degree from Rutgers Law School (1982). He was admitted to the New Jersey Bar in 1983. Mr. Scoca is a former Assistant Prosecutor in Essex County, New Jersey, and he served as the Commissioner at the Essex County Improvement Authority (1995-1997). Prior to that, he was counsel to the Fraternal Order of Police for the Newark Police Department, where he provided and coordinated legal defense for administrative and criminal matters. From 2015-2018, Mr. Scoca was the Chairman of the Criminal Law Committee for the Essex County Bar Association. In 2016, he developed Doc-U-Buy, a legal software platform designed for discovery exchange. Mr. Scoca has been involved in a host of community services over the years, to include serving on the board of the Police Athletic League in Newark, New Jersey. In 2019, he founded "We Eat," a charitable organization dedicated to providing funding to homeless shelters, food pantries, and food kitchens. Mr. Scoca is an avid outdoorsman and environmentalist, and he enjoys cooking and spending time with his family and friends.

Gregory A. Thomas, M.S. :

Gregory A. Thomas serves as the Senior Executive for Law Enforcement Operations in the Office of the Kings County (Brooklyn, N.Y.) District Attorney, the third largest district attorney's office in the United States. As a member of the executive staff, he serves as a senior advisor to District Attorney Eric Gonzalez on criminal justice and law enforcement policy and procedures and is the one of the principal office liaisons to the New York City Police Department (NYPD) and other local, state and federal law enforcement agencies in relation to sensitive investigations and operational matters. In 2014, he played the lead role in the office's creation of its Crime Strategies Unit, which works closely with the NYPD to reduce the occurrence and frequency of violent crimes in Brooklyn through the use of an approach that focuses resources on the "drivers of violent crime" and the identified "hot spots" where the majority of crime occurs. Gregory Thomas brings to this position over thirty-six years of supervisory and executive experience in the fields of criminal justice and public safety. He has served as Deputy Director of Planning and Response at the Columbia University National Center for Disaster Preparedness; as Executive Director of the Office of School Safety and Planning (a position that he held during the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001), with the New York City Department of Education, the largest school district in the United States; as an Assistant Commissioner with the New York City Fire Department; as the Associate Director of the City University of New York/NYPD Cadet Program at John Jay College of Criminal Justice; as a senior investigator and member of the executive staff with the Mollen Commission, the mayoral commission that investigated allegations of police corruption and the anti-corruption procedures of the NYPD; and as a First Deputy Inspector General with the New York City Department of Investigation, the New York City agency charged with investigating and referring for criminal prosecution cases of fraud, corruption and unethical conduct by New York City's over 300,000 employees, or contractors and others who receive money from the city. As an internationally recognized law enforcement/campus safety/emergency management expert, consultant and conference speaker, he has been featured in various international media and print venues such as the BBC, CNN, Fox News, MSNBC, NPR Radio, the New York Times, the USA Today, the U.S. News and World Report, and The Wall Street Journal. His expertise has also led to him being a part of a select group of national law enforcement thought-leaders who were invited in July of 2016 to a White House meeting convened and attended by President Barack Obama and Vice President Joseph Biden to discuss law enforcement and policing best practices after the unusual spate of police involved shootings that occurred in the spring and summer of 2016. He has testified before the U.S. House of Representatives Committee on Homeland Security and has been retained as a senior trainer and campus safety planning and emergency management consultant to the U.S. Departments of Education, Homeland Security and Justice. In 2009, he was asked to serve as a subcommittee member of the congressionally created National Commission on Children and Disasters. During his employ at Columbia University, Mr. Thomas authored and co-authored numerous academic publications and served as the lead editor and co-author of three books on school safety for the Janes Information Group, including the most comprehensive book published to date on school safety – the 450-page Janes Safe School Planning Guide for All Hazards. He is also the solo author of a book from Random House Publishers titled Freedom from Fear: A Guide to Safety, Preparedness and the Threat of Terrorism, which offers advice to readers on how to prepare themselves and their families for a worst-case scenario like a natural disaster or an act of terrorism. Mr. Thomas' professional affiliations include membership in the National Organization of Black Law Enforcement Executives (NOBLE), where he served as their 38th National President, and membership in the International Association of Chiefs of Police (IACP), where he has served on the advisory board of their Law Enforcement Policy Center (LEPC) which develops and disseminates model policies on all aspects of policing for use by law enforcement agencies throughout the world. He has also been associated with the Commission on Accreditation for Law Enforcement Agencies (CALEA) where he served as an on-site accreditation assessor of various police departments across the nation. Born and raised in Brooklyn, New York where he currently resides with his wife Kim and his family, Mr. Thomas attended public school in New York City, and then attended college at the University of Maryland, Eastern Shore, receiving a Bachelor of Arts Degree in Sociology. He completed his graduate studies at the Brooklyn Campus of Long Island University where he received a Master of Science Degree in Criminal Justice.

Robert Zito :

Bob Zito has more than 30 years of experience as a brand communications, advertising, and public relations executive in the sports, financial, pharmaceutical, and entertainment industries. As the Executive Vice President and member of the Management Committee of the New York Stock Exchange, Bob built the NYSE's brand into one of the most respected in the world. He is best known for bringing television to the NYSE trading floor and creating the daily "must-see" events of high-powered newsmakers ringing the opening and closing bells, creating global visibility for NYSE-listed companies and member firms. As Sony's Vice President of corporate communications, he helped rebrand the company as a global entertainment leader following Sony's acquisitions of CBS Records and Columbia Pictures. During his time as Chief Communications Officer and a member of the Management Committee of Bristol-Myers Squibb, he guided the successful 'Together we can prevail' brand campaign, which focused on the company's mission to help patients prevail over serious diseases. In these roles, Bob handled many crisis communications assignments, ranging from criminal issues and business interruptions, to executive transitions. At Zito Partners and Ketchum Zito Financial, Bob has helped companies with similar crisis engagements, helping CEOs and Management Committees with critical business and personal issues. Bob served as the Chairman of the Board for Pcube, a global project and program management consultancy. He serves as Vice Chairman of the FDNY Foundation and serves on the boards of the Robert Wood Johnson University Hospital and Cento Amici. He was also responsible for the New York Stock Exchange and Bristol-Myers Squibb Foundations. In 1998, Bob started the NYSE Fallen Heroes Fund, and in 1991, the Zito Family Scholarships at St. Peter's Prep. He is a graduate of Fairfield University and has completed the Advanced Management Program at Harvard University. A 1998 recipient of the Ellis Island Medal of Honor, Bob continues to be a guest lecturer at Rutgers University.

NPF Executive Fellows :

Executive Fellows at the Police Foundation are current or retired executive-level members of criminal justice organizations whose knowledge, experience and skills help advance the Foundation's mission. They serve as members of the President's Practitioner Advisory Board to help ensure the Foundation is grounded in a comprehensive understanding of the practical needs of law enforcement organizations. In addition, executive fellows serve as the Foundation's regional representatives in national and international settings. Executive Fellows work on specific projects, represent the Foundation in meetings and conferences, and develop substantive thought pieces about the pressing issues facing policing. They serve for terms determined by the Foundation's president. Executive-level individuals interested in becoming an Executive Fellow should e-mail

The Police Foundation has long recognized that to improve policing through innovation and science, effective partnerships and collaboration with other organizations, entities, and institutions are necessary. To that end, the Police Foundation has enjoyed partnerships with many entities over the years, from the Foundation's early days of partnering with agencies and research organizations to conduct groundbreaking research, to current partnerships with academic institutions, other non-profit organizations, and membership associations to expand our perspectives and to create exciting new resources and programs for the law enforcement community. Below is a listing of current formal partnerships established to further mutual goals of improving policing.

Bayes Impact :

Bayes Impact builds citizen-led public services to create a fairer and inclusive future for our societies.

CALEA :

The Gold Standard in Public Safety The Commission on Accreditation for Law Enforcement Agencies, Inc. (CALEA®), was created in 1979 as a credentialing authority through the joint efforts of law enforcement's major executive associations. The CALEA Accreditation program seals are reserved for use by those public safety agencies that have demonstrated compliance with CALEA Standards and have been awarded CALEA Accreditation by the Commission.

CEBCP :

Center for Evidence-Based Crime Policy, George Mason University — Seeking to make scientific research a key component in decisions about crime and justice policies.

IACA :

The International Association of Crime Analysts was formed in 1990 to help crime analysts around the world improve their skills and make valuable contacts, to help law enforcement agencies make the best use of crime analysis, and to advocate for standards of performance and technique within the profession itself. We accomplish these goals through training, networking, and publications.

IJIS Institute :

The IJIS Institute is a nonprofit alliance working to promote and enable technology in the public sector and expand the use of information to maximize safety, efficiency, and productivity.

International Association of Chiefs of Police :

Shaping the Future of the Policing Profession

IADLEST :

International Association of Directors of Law Enforcement Standards and Training

LISC :

Together with residents and partners, LISC forges resilient and inclusive communities of opportunity across America – great places to live, work, visit, do business and raise families.

National Law Enforcement Officers Memorial Fund :

Founded in 1984, the National Law Enforcement Officers Memorial Fund is dedicated to telling the story of American Law Enforcement and making it safer for those who serve.

1. Research & Evaluation

Define, design, conduct, and evaluate controlled experiments testing ways to improve the delivery of police services.

Stakeholder(s)

Ford Foundation :

The Ford Foundation was not alone in 1970 in raising questions about the role of the police. Policy makers, academics, the public, and, most importantly, the police themselves, wanted to know: what are we doing? why are we doing it? can we do it better? what works? how do we experiment and measure?

Researcher :

It was the foundation that first brought researchers into a lasting, constructive partnership with law enforcement.

Police Departments :

It was the foundation, in cooperation with police departments all across the country, that engendered a questioning of the traditional model of professional law enforcement and the testing of new approaches to policing.

Cities :

Since it is the spirit of experimentation rather than a specific set of tactics that the foundation seeks to encourage, there can never be an end to the process. What works in one city may not work in another. Policing constantly faces new challenges, so there is an endless process of discovery and testing, trying new ideas in changing circumstances, and testing them by the most rigorous and objective standards in real-world experiments.

Social experiments are the hardest kind because they deal with people. When the Police Foundation began its work, social experimentation was not a well-established discipline, but rather a developing art. The foundation has established and refined the capacity to define, design, conduct, and evaluate controlled experiments testing ways to improve the delivery of police services. The development of this method, its execution in the real world, and the dissemination of what it has learned constitute a unique contribution to policing and is a central reason for the foundation's existence.

2. Professional Services

Offer a range of professional services.

Stakeholder(s)

Community Policing Consortium :

As a partner in the Community Policing Consortium, along with four other leading national law enforcement organizations, the foundation played a principal role in the development of community policing research, training, and technical assistance. Since 1993, the foundation has provided community policing education, training, and technical assistance to more than 1,000 law enforcement agencies and communities.

Over the Police Foundation's history, its leadership has insisted that the organization's work have a practical impact on policing, that the knowledge gained through empirical investigation be such that it could be applied outside the "laboratory," with the end result being improvement in the way that police do their work. In addition to defining, designing, conducting, and evaluating controlled experiments, the foundation offers a range of professional services, including training, technical assistance, and technology. Training programs are custom designed to meet the needs of the individual law enforcement agency.

2.1. Training

2.2. Technical Assistance

2.3. Technology

3. Communication

Create, publish, and disseminate a new body of knowledge about policing.

Stakeholder(s)

Criminal Justice Community

Law Enforcement Practitioners

Policy Makers

Scholars

Unconstrained by partisan imperatives, the Police Foundation speaks with a unique and objective voice. Its focus and perspective is the whole of American policing, rather than any single facet. A guiding tenet of the foundation is that to advance, policing—like other public services—deserves the best of thorough, objective study, and the impetus of new ideas that have the widest possible dissemination. Since its inception in 1970, the foundation has stressed the importance of helping to create a new body of knowledge about policing. The quality and quantity of its research reports have helped make the Police Foundation a catalyst for change in American policing. By disseminating as widely as possible the publications that result from its work, the foundation seeks to ensure that the knowledge it has gained reaches the broader criminal justice community, including law enforcement practitioners, policy makers, and scholars. The president of the foundation speaks out on issues important to policing and serves as a source of advice and information to police officers and executives, public officials responsible for the quality of policing, and to members of the news media who cover criminal justice.
